SUPERSEDING INDICTMENT

The Grand Jury Charges:

The Attack

1. Late at night on July 4, 2025, a North Texas Antifa Cell (Antifa Cell) of at least eleven operatives rioted and attacked the Prairieland Detention Center (Prairieland) in Alvarado, Texas, which the U.S. Department of Homeland Security was using to house illegal aliens awaiting deportation. Members of the Antifa Cell wore "black bloc"—dark clothing with head and face coverings that concealed their identities. This tactic is designed not only to hide each individual member's identity but also to aid and abet those members engaged in illegal acts by making individual members indistinguishable from one another to law enforcement. Some members also brought body armor and firearms to Prairieland. After arriving, the Antifa Cell began shooting and throwing fireworks (explosives) towards Prairieland and vandalizing vehicles and a guard shed on Prairieland property:

2. Alarmed at the presence of unauthorized persons on Prairieland property late at night, unarmed DHS correctional officers inside the facility went outside to investigate. Other DHS personnel called local police for assistance. Within minutes, an officer from the Alvarado Police Department arrived on scene, stepped out of his police cruiser, and began issuing commands to Nathan Baumann, (a coconspirator not named as defendant herein) who was one of the rioters vandalizing government property. Baumann, who was dressed in black bloc, continued to run towards Benjamin Song, who was dressed in black bloc and holding a rifle. Song yelled, “get to the rifles!” and then, moments later, opened fire on the officers, striking the Alvarado police officer in the neck area as the unarmed DHS correctional officers ducked and ran for cover. The wounded officer fell to the ground but was able to return a few shots. Song fired additional rounds at the wounded officer and the DHS correctional officers until his rifle jammed. The Antifa Cell then fled the scene.

3. Police arrested most of the Antifa Cell shortly after the attack, many near the scene, including Zachary Evetts, Bradford Morris, Elizabeth Soto, Ines Soto, Savanna Batten, and Maricela Rueda, and Seth Sikes, Baumann, and Joy Gibson (coconspirators not named as defendants herein). Police arrested Cameron Arnold the following day. Song escaped and remained at large with the help of others until his capture on July 15, 2025.

The Antifa Cell

4. Antifa is a militant enterprise made up of networks of individuals and small groups primarily ascribing to a revolutionary anarchist or autonomous Marxist ideology, which explicitly calls for the overthrow of the United States Government, law enforcement authorities, and the system of law. Antifa adherents have espoused insurrection and advocated violence to affect the policy and conduct of the U.S. government by intimidation and coercion. Beginning in 2025, Antifa adherents have increasingly targeted agents and facilities related to DHS’s Immigration and Customs Enforcement (I.C.E.) in opposition to I.C.E.'s deportation actions and the U.S. government's policy on the removal of illegal aliens. The Antifa campaign involves coordinated efforts to obstruct enforcement of Federal law through organized riots, violent assaults, and armed confrontations with I.C.E. and law enforcement officers.

5. Most of the Antifa Cell looked to Song as a leader. Song and others recruited for the Antifa Cell from various ideologically aligned groups. For example, Ines Soto, Elizabeth Soto, and Batten were part of a group that created and distributed insurrectionary materials called "zines." Song also recruited at gun ranges and close-quarters combat training sessions he conducted.

6. Altogether, members of the Antifa Cell acquired over 50 firearms in Fort Worth, Grand Prairie, Dallas, and elsewhere. Song, for example, bought and built numerous AR-platform rifles, some of which he distributed to his co-defendants, and at least one of which featured a binary trigger. A binary trigger is a device that allows a firearm to fire more rapidly by causing two bullets to fire with each trigger cycle.

7. To hide their involvement in illegal conduct, the Antifa Cell emphasized and practiced "operational security" or "opsec" in their communications. For example, members used an encrypted messaging app to coordinate with each other. This app allowed for group chats and had auto-delete and delete-after-a-defined-time functions, which caused communications among the Antifa Cell to be permanently deleted. Most Antifa Cell members used monikers in the group chats to hide their true identities. Group chats dedicated to planning direct actions were limited to trusted participants and, even among trusted participants, were exclusive to those with a need-to-know.

The Defendants

8. Song was a resident of Dallas and used the monikers “Champaigne” and “Delete.”
9. Arnold, a/k/a Autumn Hill, was a resident of Dallas and used the moniker “Not Beating the Little Creature Allegations.”
10. Batten was a resident of Fort Worth.
11. Baumann was a resident of College Station and used the moniker “Bible.”
12. Evetts was a resident of Waxahachie and used the moniker “Jon ValJon.”
13. Gibson was a resident of Dallas and used the monikers “FoxGlove” and “Rowan.”
14. Morris, a/k/a Meagan Morris, was a resident of Dallas and used the moniker “Herald of the Mad God.”
15. Rueda was a resident of Fort Worth and used the moniker “mal crieda.”
16. Elizabeth Soto was a resident of Fort Worth.
17. Ines Soto was a resident of Fort Worth and used the moniker “N.”
18. Daniel Sanchez Estrada was a resident of Fort Worth.
19. Seth Sikes was a resident of Kennedale and used the moniker “Wise.”

The Plan

20. In the days prior to July 4, the Antifa Cell planned and coordinated the riot and attack against Prairieland using several group chats on an encrypted messaging app. One chat—which was named the “4th of July Party!” chat—consisted of the core group that planned the action (the “Core Chat”).

The Core Chat originally had eight participants, but two dropped out for “opsec reasons” after they stated they would not attend the July 4 action. The six remaining members were Evetts, Song, Morris, Gibson, Rueda, and Sikes. Members in the Core Chat conducted detailed reconnaissance and planning. For example, Evetts and Rueda attended a peaceful protest at Prairieland earlier in the day on July 4 in order to scout the facility. Evetts relayed in the Core Chat details about the fences and gates, including the time it took for the gates to open and close and how long it took trash pickup to get in and out of the facility. Rueda circulated a picture of a security camera at the entrance to the facility and noted that a nearby house had a doorbell camera. Evetts assessed that “signs, laws, and social pressure are the only things keeping someone from getting right up to the fence.” Rueda posted a Google map that showed the location of local police departments in relation to Prairieland.

21. The members of the Core Chat planned what materials to bring to the riot and attack, including firearms, medical kits, and fireworks. For example, Evetts asked the Core Chat group if they would be “doing black bloc and rifles?” Gibson stated that they would be wearing bloc and keeping “kit” on hand, “bringing a wagon to hold armor and rifles.” When Rueda suggested that “rifles might make the situation more hot,” Song replied that rifles would be used to intimidate law enforcement, stating, “Cops are not trained or equipped for more than one rifle so it tends to make them back off.”

22. Song also advertised the July 4 riot on a larger chat (the “Large Chat”) but left out certain details in an effort to avoid being identified as one of the organizers. As

Rueda warned in the Core Chat, “if anyone pins us for ‘organizing’ that’s where we’d lose.”

23. The Large Chat included Song, Arnold, Baumann, Evetts, Gibson, Morris, Rueda, Ines Soto, and dozens of “trusted” individuals. Song circulated a flyer for the Prairieland riot in the Large Chat, stating “Share with trusted folks only. Do not Post. Mask up! Be loud!” Members of the Large Chat discussed the event as a “noise demonstration” involving fireworks.

24. Participants in the Large Chat expressed concerns about law enforcement’s response to the action. For example, Baumann noted that the area around Prairieland was “pretty rural so it will be difficult to lose [I.C.E] if shi[t] hits the fan. Plus seems like a lot of the locals in the area will not be happy about our presence.” Ines Soto responded that they were probably “more likely to deal with local PD than I.C.E.” but suggested that “the level of concern seems way over the top to me.” Throughout the Large Chat, Ines Soto and Rueda attempted to downplay concerns about law enforcement, urging action and referring to noise demonstrations as “low risk.”

25. In addition to the encrypted messaging group chats, Song, Arnold, Morris, and others met in person on July 3 at a “gear check” at Morris and Arnold’s residence. There, Arnold asked Song if they would be bringing guns to the July 4 action. Song replied that they would because he would not be going to jail. Song repeated words to this effect multiple times throughout the evening, putting everyone there on notice of his intent to shoot at police rather than be arrested.

26. Song, Arnold, Evetts, Gibson, Morris, and Rueda staged at Morris and Arnold's house on the evening of July 4 and carpooled to Prairieland. Elizabeth Soto, Ines Soto, and Batten drove together and arrived at Prairieland a little later than Song and the others. Baumann drove by himself from College Station. The Antifa Cell brought a total of eleven firearms, four of which had been purchased by Song.

27. Paragraphs 1 through 26 are incorporated in each Count of this Indictment.
